

Enelle

Handwritten text in a dense, cursive script, likely a historical document or manuscript. The text is written in a dark ink on aged paper and covers most of the page. It appears to be a formal or legal document, possibly a contract or a record of a transaction, given the structured nature of the lines and the presence of some larger, possibly significant words or phrases. The script is highly stylized and difficult to decipher without specialized knowledge of the language and dialect used.

Handwritten text at the bottom of the page, possibly a signature or a concluding statement. It includes the words "Hic est" and "quod" which are Latin terms often used in legal or official documents to denote a specific point or a condition. The text is written in the same cursive style as the main body of the document.

Handwritten signature or name, possibly "Jo. Anre" followed by a large, decorative flourish. The signature is written in a bold, cursive hand and is positioned in the bottom left corner of the page.
