

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a historical document or letter. The text is dense and covers most of the page. It appears to be a formal communication, possibly a petition or a report, given the structured nature of the lines and the use of capital letters at the beginning of several lines. The ink is dark, and the paper shows some signs of age and wear.

Prorogatio
Semporalibus
Litterarum
et Regum

Handwritten text in a cursive script, continuing from the main body of the document. It is written in a similar style to the text above, with dense, flowing letters. The text is organized into several lines, with some lines starting with capital letters. The overall appearance is that of a formal document or a series of related letters.

Handwritten text in a cursive script, likely a list or account. The text is dense and difficult to decipher due to the cursive style. It appears to be organized into several lines, possibly representing items or entries.

Handwritten text on the left side of the page, possibly a date or a reference number.

Handwritten text at the top of the page, possibly a title or a heading.

Large handwritten signature or name, possibly 'J. J. J. J. J.' or similar, written in a highly stylized cursive script.